Betty-Lou Kristy of Georgetown shared the sad story of her 25-year-old son's addiction to OxyContin and his 2001 death to drug overdose in Toronto last Wednesday.

Kristy, who struggled with mental health issues and addiction herself, spoke at a press conference for the release of a report by a panel of experts, set up by Health Minister Deb Matthews to study the addiction problem. Kristy is a member of the panel.

Kristy recalled her son Pete saying Oxy "made him feel like Superman" after he became hooked on it and booze after years of struggling with learning disabilities, depression and anxiety. His doctor prescribed the drug for gastrointestinal problems. The pills not only took care of his physical pain, but also alleviated his emotional and mental pain, said Kristy.

Pete began seeing several doctors to get more. When
